THE MUSEO ITALO-AMERICANO DEBUTS AT FORT MASON

Fort Mason Center is pleased to welcome the arrival of the Museo Italo-Americano, a museum devoted to the works of Italian and Italian-American artists, featuring a rich and varied permanent collection as well as a program of prestigious traveling exhibitions. Located on the ground floor of Building C, the museum opened to the general public, Sunday, April 14 with an exhibit of recent paintings by Mario Schifano.

As the first museum of its kind in the U.S., the Museo Italo-Americano is dedicated to fostering appreciation of Italian art, architecture and culture. Its primary objective is to "preserve and nurture the Italian heritage for the more than 120,000 Italians and Americans of Italian descent living in the greater Bay Area."

Modesto Lanzone, President of the Museo's Board of Directors, expresses the hope that the Museo Italo-Americano will set an example that "will be followed by all cities in the U.S. where Italians and Italian-Americans have made their unique contribution—a contribution rooted in that Italian which is such an essential element of Western Civilization.

The artist who is featured in the opening show, Mario Schifano, was born in Rome in 1934 and is mainly self-taught. His work has been shown in the United States with that of Rauschenberg, Oldenberg and Jasper Johns. Today, he is considered a leading contemporary Italian painter. This is the first time Schifano has exhibited in San Francisco.

In addition to the shows of contemporary and historic artists, the Museo sponsors a variety of special events and programs throughout the year. "Italian-American Women's Day" and the "Italian-American Writer's Symposium" are two of the most popular, while art lectures and the monthly Italian film series are also well attended. Other programs include language classes taught by native Italian instructors, guided tours of Italianate architecture in San Francisco, concerts, and poetry readings.

The concept of the Museo was inspired by Guiliana Nardelli Haight, who, when she arrived here from Italy, saw the need for an Italian cultural center in the city. Aided by several prominent members of the Italian community, Ms. Haight founded the Museo in 1978. It was first housed in a small donated space above a coffee shop, later in a location at Casa Fugazi on Green Street where for five years it steadily expanded, Now, the Museo is enjoying a spacious new gallery of 5000 square feet, thus joining the six other museums and galleries located in Fort Mason Center.

The spectacular transformation of warehouse space by means of an innovative interior design was accomplished by Teresa Pomodoro. A native of Italy herself, Pomodoro has extensive background in space planning, design and restoration. Her first major project in this country was Modesto Lanzone's Opera Plaza Restaurant. Others have included the Paule Anglim Gallery and Moss Gallery. Her master plan features a major gallery forming the center where traveling exhibits will be mounted, and an adjacent wing to house the permanent collection. This currently includes the works of artists such as Frank Stella, Rico Lebrun, Mark Di Suvero, Tina Modotti, and Beniamino Bufano. There is also a group of rare Etrusican and Roman artifacts. A soundproof conference room will be used for classes, as a library and is equipped for an audio-visual center. A small gift shop will offer books, postcards, and native arts and crafts.

The newly appointed Associate Director, Kate Northcott, has served as Exhibition Coordinator at the S.F. Museum of Modern Art and at the Fine Arts Museums of S.F., working on such shows as the Vatican and Hopper Exhibitions and the Tiffany show. She is an artist in her own right, with a special interest in printmaking.

Daily hours of the Museo Italo-Americano are Wednesday thru Sunday, noon to 5pm. Admission is free. For more information, call 673-2200.

MFA GRAD EXHIBIT TAKES ON NEW PROPORTIONS IN PIER 2

For those interested in work by new Bay Area artists, May 4th marks the opening of a first-time event: an exhibition of degree requirement work by the MFA graduates of the San Francisco Art Institute. This highly unusual presentation is comprised of about 60 solo showings and runs through May 11, with daily viewing from noon to 5pm. The show is free to the public and is being held in Pier 2.

In the past, graduates were only able to show one or two pieces of work in rotating exhibits each spring at the Institute's small gallery. This year a concerted effort to move the show elsewhere resulted in its being held in the spacious Fort Mason Center pier facilities. The students worked on the design and installation of the show, and a catalog has been created to give viewers a history of each work and biographical sketches of the artists. Despite the massive undertaking, the exhibitors agree that the show is much more representative of the graduating class's work. The new format also give students an opportunity to curate their own work and present it to a much larger audience.

Viewers will be treated to a full repertoire of visual arts: painting, photography, sculpture, film and a new genre in art called performance video. Jim Pomeroy, faculty coordinator for this event, describes performance video as ". . .time-structured and ephemeral presentations growing out of sculpture trends and echoing ideas present in dance . . ."

The entire pier will be utilized, the back area devoted to large-scale installations, like the work of Francis Snyder, who is converting a 17-foot motor boat into sculpture. Su-Chen Hung plans to transform four upstairs rooms into a walk-through film/light show. Su-Chen sees her art as an extension of her heritage and experiences: "I am from the Orient and am interested in the integration of two cultures, the braid of yellow and white. In the Orient they use a lot of primary colors and paper to soften light; this will be reflected in my piece. . . ." Another artist, Kim Anno, uses acrylic paintings to communicate her concern about the world: "My work has reference to landscape, but is done in the context of growing up in an era where the threat of nuclear annihiliation is incomprehensible. I am not so much a foreseer of doomsday as a seeker of the symbols of survival. . . ." Many of the artists work in several mediums so the show promises to be extremely diversified, representing the various private visions of the artists.

Fort Mason Center is proud to have the opportunity to host this great Art Institute event. As Dean of the College Fred Martin stated: "They have completed the program now; each has fulfilled this stage of a work in art which ends only in progress to the next. We are proud of their achievement with us, and humble before the strength of the work which we believe they will go on to achieve tomorrow. . ."

The opening reception for the show will be held on Saturday, May 4th, from 1 to 6pm. For more information, call the Art Institute at 771-7020.

FMC UPDATE

Sundae at the Hostel. The San Francisco International Hostel commemorates its 5th birthday and National Youth Hostel Week with a reception on May 5 from 2 to 4pm. "Sundae at the Hostel." will give those already involved and those interested in hosteling the opportunity to tour the recently renovated facilities located at upper Fort Mason. Accompanying the festivities will be the presentation of the Dorothy Erskine Award for distinguished service in hosteling. Call 771-1065 for details.

The Mexican Museum celebrates Cinco de Mayo and International Museum Day by presenting the talented guitarist Jose Luis Orozco. Mr. Orozco plans to augment his performance of Mexican corridos and ballads with a commentary on the significance of "El Cinco de Mayo." It all happens Saturday, May 11 at 5:30pm in the museum's galleries. Tickets are $3 for the public and $2.50 for museum members. Come early or plan a return visit and explore the many paintings and works on paper that comprise the museum's permanent collection. Of special interest, this month and through June 25, are exhibits of pre-Hispanic women's garments, colonial art, and an installation of pre-Hispanic artifacts from the Cohn-Anderson Collection. Call 441-0404 for more information.

Hands On Wood. Woodworking enthusiasts and admirers of Afro-American arts and crafts, take note. This month, Hands On Wood's curriculum includes a class taught by celebrated wood sculptor Geoffrey Nwogu. Mr. Nwogu begins his two-part instruction on Thursday, May 16 from 7 to 10pm with a lecture/slide show that highlights both his traditional African sculpture and contemporary works. The class continues on Saturday, May 18 from 11am to 5pm as Mr. Nwogu conducts a hands-on workshop. Space is limited, so interested parties should register early. The number to call is 567-2205.
